In Season and Out...

There are some things you do only at certain seasons of the year. Like enjoying a nice cool slice of watermelon. The lady in the picture is really enjoying that cool watermelon. Maybe she realizes that in a few more days now, the watermelon season will be over, and she will have to wait many months until they "come in" again.

The things that are strictly seasonal, however, are getting fewer. There are many things in our times that we enjoy year around that used to be restricted to special seasons. Refrigeration, improved packaging, storage and distribution, have worked wonders to improve our standard of living.

One of the things that is definitely NOT SEASONAL is Business Service. Not here in friendly Appomattox, anyway. Day in and day out, week in and week out, month in and month out, Appomattox Business Service is available to you.

Here are some splendid examples of what we mean, and they are compelling reasons WHY it is to Your Advantage to Do Business in Appomattox:

The ambulance service of Richard D. Robinson is available around the clock. It is as near as your telephone: 3331 or 2231.

And the Appomattox Telephone Company has done a tremendous job in expanding and improving service. We think it is one of the outstanding Independent Telephone Companies in Virginia.

Grinels Motor Company is on the job, regardless of the season, to provide the sales and service mordern standards require.

Appmattox Hardware Company is one of Virginia's oldest and best firms, specializing in every conceivable hardware item, appliances, plumbing and contracting.

Pulliam Motor Sales is a leader in supplying and servicing farm equipment and has rendered commendable service to our farmers, as well as appliance customers.

Inge's Department Store, now in newly remodeled quarters is not only an excellent variety store, but features ready-to-wear, a baby shop, and novelty items making a visit there very worthwhile.

J. E. Sears & Company, with a branch in Lynchburg as well as a big shop and plant and retail store here, merits the slogan, "Every thing to build anything."

Moses Motor Co. has one of the most outstanding records in Virginia for sales and service on Chevrolet and Oldsmobile. Appomattox would never be the same without these friendly people. They are always on the job.

Poe Hardware Company has built up vast variety of service and sales in the hardware and appliance line. Paints include the famous Sherwin-Williams line.

And another fine example of Appomattox enterprise and service is the J. E. Jamerson & Sons firm. Keeping busy to build Appomattox!

Averett's Department Store is a favorite of shoppers in this area, and justly so. Popular prices prevail and it's convenient location calls for you to see them for all department store items.

The Bank of Appomattox is noted for its sound leadership in the economy of this area. Its ideals of service have won the respect of several generations.

LeGrand's Gulf Service station is really "on the ball" to serve the motorist. "Ned and Boots" Legrand are service station men of tremendous popularity and if you try them once, you will be a regular customer.

Coleman's Feed and Seed Store has a plant with vast space and therefore carries a wonderful line of feeds and seeds and other items on the list of farmers who visit Appomattox. They are Southern States Dealers.

Oscar Jamerson & Sons are a real asset to Appomattox. Pulpwood, Logs, Lumber, etc. are their speciality and they know the business and so are able to contribute to the goodwill in which timber owners look upon Appomattox.

The Farmers National Bank has a wonderful record of service to our community and you just can't beat its friendly staff for service to banking needs. Business places like this help make Appomattox grow.

TURKEYS MUST HAVE EVERYTHING PERFECT

You may think some people are fussy and easily subjected to stresses and strains, but just wait until you hear about the turkey.

Dr. Arthur T. Ringrose, poultry specialist at VPI, says young turkeys could starve to death if the feeders and waterers were moved so they could not find them, or if there is too little light for the feeders to be seen.

Tests have shown that turkey poults do not always know what is best for them. Most people know that the starter ration for poults should be an all-mash feed. Research and field experiences show that the use of such a ration pays off in rapid, uniform, and early growth of the poults with little mortality and an improved efficiency of feed use.

All-mash rations are advantageous in many ways. They save labor. They can be crumbled or pelleted, to save waste. As mash or crumbles, they can be used with automatic feeders. As pellets, they flow uniformly from large, bulk, field feeders.

Dr. Ringrose says turkey poults are subject to many "stresses" that can be harmful during the starting and growing period. The most obvious of these are overheating, shilling, insufficient feeding or watering space, and insufficient lighting of the feeders and waterers. In raising turkeys, the specialist says, there is no half-way point. The turkey wants it perfect.

CARE OF SWEATERS

New ideas that will help you care for your orlon sweaters are being discovered by clothing specialists who make a study of textiles. One helpful idea they have come up with as an aid to quick drying, is to use cold water for the final rinse.

Wash the sweater in the usual way with lukewarm suds, but do not squeeze. Lift out with your hands underneath the sweater, and place in a warm rinse, then in a second one, until all the soap is out. Do not pull any part of the sweater, or tug at it. This will only stretch it out of shape.

After the second warm rinse, put the sweater in a cold rinse. A few ice cubes in the water will help. Leave it in the rinse until the cold penetrates the fibers. When it is thoroughly cold, it can be squeezed in a turkish towel without causing creases.

Next, it should be smoothed out to dry on a towel, or hung on a rustless hanger to dry. It is important to remember to never squeeze orlon when it is warm, only when it is absolutely cold.

Adding a teaspoonful of detergent to the final rinse will, so the experts have discovered, reduce the static in an orlon sweater. You will find it more comfortable to wear, and not too clinging. It will lessen the tendency of the fabric surface to roll into little balls. Turning the sweater inside out before washing, buttoning it from top to bottom, is another way to prevent this.

The destrgent rinse is good for nylon slips or lingerie of other man-made fabrics that have a tendency to cling to the legs.

Durable Natural Wood Finish Developed at Forest Laboratory

A durable natural finish for wood house siding has been developed by the Forest Products Laboratory at Madison, Wisconsin.

Agricultural engineers at VPI explain that natural finishes are being used on an increasing number of houses, but most of those on the market last only a year.

The newly developed finish will last about four years. It is classed as a modified stain and is particularly good for such sidings as western red cedar, redwood, or Philippine mahogany.

The stain is made up of 3 gallons of boiled linseed oil, 1 gallon of turpentine or paint thinner, 1 pint burnt sienna color-in-oil, 1 pint raw umber color-in-oil, 1 pound paraffin wax, 1/2 gallon penta centrate 10:1, and 2 ounces zinc stearate.

Extreme caution must be used in preparing the formula. While the home owner can do it if he uses care, it might be better to have a painter prepare the mixture. Some companies include the finish in their regular lines, and some will make it upon request.

While the Forest Products Laboratory plans to test this finish longer before giving it unqualified recommendation, word of its excellent performance on tests to date has filtered through the paint industry and brought many requests for the formula.

The finish has drawbacks. It dries slowly, taking one full day of good drying weather. Also, because it contains wax, the finish is hard to paint over.

Peak Climb O.K.'d

Katmandu, Nepal.- The Government of Nepal has granted an Argentinian mountaineering expedition permission to climb the 26,795-foot Himalayan peak of Dhaulagiri—the sixth highest mountain in the world and the highest still unclimbed. The attempt will be made in the fall of 1959.

EUROPEAN CORN BORERS WIDESPREAD IN VIRGINIA

European corn borers are damaging corn in all parts of the state, and in many cases the damage is quite severe, report VPI entomologists.

Unhappily, at the present time there is no practical control for this insect in field corn, the entomologists say.

Bagworms are another troublesome insect these days, causing damage to ornamentals. They can be controlled with arsenate of lead spray or dust, or DDT spray or dust during the period when the larvae are feeding. Bagworms can be controlled also by removing and burning or otherwise destroying the bags during the fall or winter.

Grasshopper Costs $600

Liberal, Kan.- A grasshopper is a small thing, but sometimes dangerous. This one cost $600.

The insect lit on the face of a 2-year-old child who was in a car beside her mother. The child screamed, the mother swerved the car and it crashed into a parked vehicle.

Damage to the cars totaled $600 and the baby, Danna Lynn Ables, got a cut and bump on her head.
